

Linnea, We Think Of You

Dear Linnea, as the sun blazes over the hill
And showers the sunlight on our window sill,
And shines on the flowers in each garden plot
We all think of you 'cause we love you a lot.

Each night as the moonbeams caress every tree
And sprinkle their light that's as soft as can be
And skip 'or the water of lake, stream and pond,
We think of our daughter of whom we are so fond.

When raindrops descend to the ground from the sky
And give to all flora the drink from on high,
And send to the earth new life from above
We think of Linnea who gave so much love.

When nightfall descends to each house on our street
And each of us climbs in his bed for his sleep,
We count all the things with which we've been blest
And dream of Linnea, every night as we rest.
