In Blackwater Woods
by Mary Oliver

Look, the trees are turning
their own bodies
into pillars

in my lifetime
leads back to this: the fires and the black river of loss whose other side

of light,
are giving off the rich
fragrance of cinnamon
and fulfillment,

is salvation,
whose meaning
none of us will ever know.
To live in this world

the long tapers
of cattails
are bursting and floating away over the blue shoulders

you must be able to do three things:
to love what is mortal;
to hold it

of the ponds,
and every pond,
no matter what its name is, is against your bones knowing your own life depends on it;

and, when the time comes to let it go, to let it go.

nameless now.
Every year
everything
I have ever learned

Appreciation

evidenced in thought, deed, and attendance at the service.
